

The Future Of The UN: A Strategy For Like-minded Nations

- Conducting an outreach strategy that includes events and diverse activities to raise awareness on the challenges of middle-income countries within the UN community and with the general public;
- Advocating and promoting middle-income countries views and perspectives through statements, resolutions and active participation in sustainable development-related processes, within UN bodies, specialized agencies and Funds;
- Supporting and promoting the establishment of multidimensional measures of progress that go beyond income criteria and that incorporate the three dimensions of sustainable development: economic, social and environmental;

We agreed to meet regularly at the margins of the United Nations, including through high-level meetings, in order to ensure political coordination and guidance and enhance the implementation of the interests and goals of the Group. Different formats of such meetings could be envisaged;

We finally underlined our intention and determination to support the advancement of the ambitious middle-income countries agenda and requested the Like-Minded Group to actively engage in the process of promoting the interests of middle-income countries in the United Nations and other relevant fora.
